CISM

Enhancing the quality of life for those we serve.

What is CISM?

Critical Incident Stress Management, or CISM, is an intervention protocol developed specifically for dealing with traumatic events. It is a formal, highly structured and professionally recognized process for helping those involved in a critical incident share their experiences, vent emotions, learn about stress reactions and symptoms and receive referral for further help if required.

CISM is not psychotherapy. It is a confidential, voluntary and educative process, sometimes called 'psychological first aid'. First developed for use with military combat veterans it was then utilized for civilian first responders such as police, fire, ambulance, emergency workers and disaster rescuer. CISM has now been adapted and is used virtually everywhere there is a need to address traumatic impact in people's lives.

There are several types of CISM interventions that can be used depending on the situation. Variations of the intervention include groups, individuals, families and intervention in the workplace.

Examples of Critical Incidents

- Automobile accident, or any accident involving serious injury and/or property damage.
- Industrial accidents involving serious injuries or fatalities.
- Robbery and violent crimes
- Homicide(s)
- Line of duty death or injury among emergency/law enforcement personnel
- Any life threatening experience
- Natural Disasters- Fires, Floods, Earthquakes, Hurricanes, Tornadoes
- Multiple injury/fatality accidents
- Large scale environmental pollution

“Disaster stress is a normal reaction to an abnormal situation.”
